vision

The Policy and Determinants of Health Equity Advisory Committee envisions a future where nursing competencies regarding social drivers of health, policy, and community building are incorporated into nursing curriculum with the goal to develop savvy, knowledgeable, competent nurses poised to address health equity. Armed with this new knowledge and competency, we hope for an increased presence of nursing in the community to extend the conversation and skills related to health equity beyond the silos of hospitals and clinics. Seeing the effects of social drivers of health impacting our patients, we hope for a more significant enthusiasm and participation of nurses with political action including voting, advocacy, and appointments to presidential and state-based committees so that nursing has a profound voice in the future of health.

definitions

| Term | Definition |
| Social Determinants of Health/Social Drivers of Health (used interchangeably at times) | The social determinants of health (SDH) are the non-medical factors that influence health outcomes. They are the conditions in which people are born, grow, work, live, and age, and the wider set of forces and systems shaping the conditions of daily life. These forces and systems include economic policies and systems, development agendas, social norms, social policies and political systems. – World Health Organization |
| Health Equity | Equity is the absence of unfair, avoidable or remediable differences among groups of people, whether those groups are defined socially, economically, demographically, or geographically or by other dimensions of inequality (e.g. sex, gender, ethnicity, disability, or sexual orientation). Health is a fundamental human right. Health equity is achieved when everyone can attain their full potential for health and well-being. Health and health equity are determined by the conditions in which people are born, grow, live, work, play and age, as well as biological determinants. Structural determinants (political, legal, and economic) with social norms and institutional processes shape the distribution of power and resources determined by the conditions in which people are born, grow, live, work, play and age. – World Health Organization |
| Health Disparities | Health disparities are preventable differences in the burden of disease, injury, violence, or opportunities to achieve optimal health that are experienced by socially disadvantaged populations. – Centers for Disease Control |
| Health Inequities | Health inequities are differences in health status or in the distribution of health resources between different population groups, arising from the social conditions in which people are born, grow, live, work and age. Health inequities are unfair and could be reduced by the right mix of government policies. – World Health Organization |
| Policy | Policy is a law, regulation, procedure, administrative action, incentive, or voluntary practice of governments and other institutions. – Centers for Disease Control |
